

TREE REASONS

David Noble wanted to save the Wollemi pines for a number of reasons - not the least that it was one of the oldest living species of trees on the planet. In the spaces below provide 8 reasons we need to protect all our trees.

The diagram features a central illustration of a lush green tree with a brown trunk, set against a light grey circular background. Eight black arrows radiate from the tree, pointing towards eight empty rectangular boxes arranged in a circle around it. The boxes are intended for students to write reasons for protecting trees.

Is developing a sense of their connectedness to nature.
